APRIL 2021

Spring Ahead

March 8th, it was announced that libraries could open to the public again. This announcement took everyone by surprise—including the libraries! It was something of a scramble but Peace River Library was able to open by Wednesday, March 10th. There are still restrictions of course. We have to limit the number of people in the building at one time and no social gatherings. Masks are mandatory and we ask that you wash or sanitize your hands upon entry. Programs are happening virtually but they ARE happening. Public computers are available for 90 minute sessions. Exam proctoring is also available again. If you are still not comfortable coming inside to get your books, Grab & Go is still available by appointment.

When you get to the library you might be a bit confused because the sign says that we are open but the door is locked. This is simply a precaution to make sure each person gets counted as they come in. We really are happy to see you! If for some reason there isn't someone there waiting to let you in, just ring the doorbell and someone will be there in a flash to greet you.
